catching a plane from Germany to Nashville to work on his vocals. In the middle of crossing that item off the top of his list, he met singer-songwriter, Kristin K. Smith. Encouraged by her words and moved by her actions, Rob Georg started to record and publish music. Under her guidance, and with the help of a handful of other talented folks, Rob Georg started down a musical path and never looked back. That was in June 2018. Now he's five songs deep, including his latest releases, the country ballad "Carry The Wind" and "Dust." Very few would imagine a cowboy from Germany, but Rob Georg just doesn't wear the label, he lives the lifestyle. He spent the first chapter of his life as a professional equestrian athlete.

How did you come by your stage name? I am looking for authenticity in music, so I decided to use my real name. Though Rob is just the short version of Robert. When did you discover your love for your craft and what made you realize you wanted to pursue a career in it? My parents made me play the piano when I was 6 years old. Since that time I love making music. My vocal coach in Nashville, Kristin K. Smith, made me realize that I have something special in my voice. She was the one pushing into my career, and I am so thankful that published one of my songs. Today she is my producer and Co-Writer. To what or whom do you accredit your sense of style?

she was so persistent back then. Without her, I would have never

Country and Rock Music fan, my Mom was into 70's Pop and German Schlager. The biggest influence on me had Kenny Rogers with his song "The Gambler". I love that he is telling stories in his songs. You can also find a story of my life packed in each and every one of my songs. On your upcoming project, how did you come up with the concept? My brand new single which dropped 06/07/2019 is all about put my love for tattoos in a song. The same evening I started to write on that song, the result was a piece of Southern Rock with a little Country Blend. What are some of your greatest challenges, and what is your greatest attribute when it comes to your work ethic? As I am living on a ranch with horses, dogs, sheep, and cattle, I have a 24/7 job. Sometimes it's hard for me to find enough time for my music. I guess that is really the biggest challenge for me. Werden Sie zum Stereo-Typ pressure. I can sit down and focus in front of an empty piece of paper, havin' a deadline comin' up and somehow the lyrics would just float.

In my eyes, you are never best at what you do! You are never too old to learn. Every time I listen to my older recordings I find little things which I'd do differently now. So for me, tryin' to get better is a never-ending story. What are your plans for the near future?

I just came back from another recording session in Nashville and a radio tour from Denver to Seattle. At the moment I have my gig season going on until 31st of October, followed by another recording session in Nashville and another radio tour through the US mid region. My first album will drop in January 2020, so I will be a bit busy the next months. Is there anyone you'd like to thank, any shout outs? Yes, I have to thank a lot of people. First of all, I have to thank Kristin K. Smith, my producer, vocal coach, and co-writer for all she did for me. Then there are the guys of the band tracking the instruments for my tracks at Saxman Studios in Nashville.

They are doing a perfect and unbelievable job led by Skot Bradley, my music director at the recordings and also one of my co-writers. Danielle Shields, my Nashville photographer, that lady does a great job. My parents, daughter, son-in-law and wife who are supporting in so many ways. The music critics, blogs, playlists, radio DJ's and
